POOL HOUSE DREAMS

In terms of a guesthouse and pool addition, this project took longer than anticipated, but in the end was worth it. My client was a delight to work with – she knows what she likes but also knows how to trust her designer with the details. We had such fun pulling this space together by adding all the unique design elements that made it whole. Remember to keep things similar for a smooth transition and a clean, uncluttered feel.

We chose to go with a more modern color palette, creating a clean and bright space that opens up to the outdoor kitchen and pool area from five double doors. With my client's large family, this entire indoor and outdoor space is sure to entertain everyone.

A vaulted ceiling and metal stair rail make the space by adding interesting angles and textures. I chose to incorporate reclaimed wood doors made by Jacob Wolfe, which perfectly tied in with the wet bar's gorgeous wood tile backsplash that I found at Renaissance Tile. A mixture of wood and metal in the tables, bar stools, and lighting add an urban loft-like feel.

We continued the colors and textures down the hall and into the kitchen, bath, and guest bedroom, giving the entire space continuity. It may be a little chilly for the pool now, but with heaters around the outdoor kitchen, this space will be used all year round! ♦
